

Risk Central

Access these white papers or find others by searching the extensive database at RiskCentral.com

Is There Really a Need to Address Future Challenges Facing the Workers' Comp Industry?

This article focuses on fixing the problems already facing workers' comp.

Cost Increases Drive Higher Drug Trend for Workers' Compensation

Overall drug trend for workers' compensation increased 9.5%, according to the Express Scripts Workers' Compensation Drug Trend Report.

Focus on Pharmacy: Compound Medications

Compounded medications, created as one-of-a-kind prescriptions, are becoming a sneaking suspicion within the healthcare management industry.

The Heart and Science of Workers' Comp – Tipping points: When Good Claims Go Bad

Preventing typical WC claims from escalating to high-cost levels resulting in return-to-work delays and possible litigation is a recurring challenge.

Response to "Compounding is Confounding Workers' Compensation"

My colleagues that participate in CompPharma authored a very good piece on compounding medications.

Why Unbundled?

Organizations are faced with multiple risks. The key is how to properly manage these risks to prevent overall losses.

Advantages of an Enterprise Web Portal for Professional Liability Insurance Companies

Whether business-to-business (for agents) or business-to-customer (for insureds) the web portal is a must-have for any size insurance company.

Prevalence of Compound Medications in the Workers' Compensation Industry

A recent trend in medical treatment is the use of compound medications. Compounding refers to the process of creating a custom medication to treat a patient's medical condition.

Physical Therapy in the Injured Worker: Missed Opportunities for Cost Containment

A narrow focus on overutilization leads to missed opportunities for cost containment.

Successfully Managing Claims that Shift from Medical-Only to Lost Time

The nature of workplace injuries means that there will always be injuries that are more complex than it first appears and claims that will convert from medical-only to lost time.